ENB at HOME: Wednesday Watch Parties

English National Ballet today announces the next instalments of their Wednesday Watch Party series. Following the successful launch of the series, which saw over 100,000 people tuning in for the online stream of Broken Wings, Rudolf Nureyev's Romeo & Juliet will receive its online premiere on 6 May, followed by Azure Barton's Fantastic Beings on 13 May.

Through their Wednesday Watch Parties, which are a part of ENB at HOME, English National Ballet invites audiences around the world to enjoy never before seen full-length recordings of Company performances. The Wednesday evening (7pm) premieres on Facebook and YouTube give people the chance to see some of English National Ballet's most loved productions, for free, from their own homes. Recordings are available for 48 hours.

The online premiere of Romeo & Juliet sees English National Ballet Lead Principals Alina Cojocaru and Isaac Hernández as Shakespeare's star-crossed lovers. Created for the Company in 1977 to celebrate the Queen's Silver Jubilee, this production features Rudolf Nureyev's passionate choreography, sumptuous sets and costumes, and Prokofiev's evocative score, here performed live by English National Ballet Philharmonic. This performance of Romeo & Juliet was recorded at The Bristol Hippodrome in 2015 as part of English National Ballet's annual Autumn UK Tour.

Fantastic Beings will also be streamed in full for the first time. Azure Barton's fantastical, energetic work was originally created for English National Ballet's She Said programme in 2016. With a cast of 20 English National Ballet dancers, this reworked version was recorded at Sadler's Wells in 2018 when it was performed as part of the company's Voices of America mixed bill. The work is accompanied by a dynamic score by Mason Bates, Anthology of Fantastic Zoology, performed live by English National Ballet Philharmonic.

Whilst English National Ballet's building is closed and some future performances and events have been cancelled, ENB at HOME sees the Company continue to give free access to great ballet content as well as providing ways to keep people fit and moving during these uncertain times. This includes online ballet classes tailored to suit a range of abilities, virtual performances from ENB Philharmonic, blogs, playlists and behind the scenes insights.

The programme for further Wednesday Watch Parties will be announced in due course.

Supporting English National Ballet

We have deeply appreciated the many warm wishes and expressions of empathy and care from friends and fans from around the globe. Ticket sales provide substantial revenue funding, contributing over a third of our annual income. There are substantial financial implications to postponements in our programme that impact our future work.
